Please explain how these funds will be used to provide a public benefit:

In 2008 the Calhoun County School District began the process of removing many of its middle and elementary facilities while building two brand new K-8 structures. One of the facilities to be torn down was the old John Ford Middle School (which had earlier been a high school as well). The unique history of this particular school and its deep importance to Calhoun County's African-American Community led to the School District donating this site to the County instead of tearing it down. The hope was that a modern, true "Community Center" could be realized and that the heritage of this location would be forever protected.
