Logging Train Rec...		Renovation of Logging Train. This is for cosmetic esthetics and not for mechanical or electrical (Sandblasting will be necessary to remove rust and prepare the metal surface for repairs and painting. Repairs to structural components will require welding and possibly custom metal fabrication. Reconstructing a metal cab & Hood and moving parts, etc for a logging train involves several processes, including metal fabrication, welding, and potential retrofitting of old or custom components. The overall cost will depend on the complexity of the design, and the materials needed. After the sandblasting and repairs, the train will need to be primed and painted. (Starting Cost at $70.000) Reconstruction of the metal train, labor could take anywhere from 400 to 1000 hours depending on the complexity of the design and the work required. Unforeseen Costs: There are always unknowns in renovation projects, especially with older equipment like a rusted logging train. This might include additional structural issues or replacement parts that weren't identified during the initial inspection. $70,000 to $150,000+, depending on the size, complexity, and unforeseen issues encountered during the renovation process.	70,000.00
